MACK ROBS ROAD WORKERS OF $80

HOLDS UP COMPANIONS AT THE POINT OF A GUN

IS HELD AT ST. JOSEPH

Warrant For Arrest Issued—Will Be Brought To Maryville By Roach and Randall

Bob Mack, giving his home as Hardin, Mo., who has been employed on the state highway, held up at the point of a gun and robbed seven companions at the road camp of about $80, a mile and a half east of Burlington Junction, between the hours of 11 o'clock Saturday night and 1 o'clock Sunday morning. From information from the sheriff's office it is understood that a friendly game of craps had been going on Saturday evening and that there was some liquor in the camp. Mack, with another man, left the camp and went to Burlington Junction in a car. When he came back to the road camp he committed the robbery. The men in this camp have been grading on the state highway between Maryville and Burlington Junction and Mack has been employed by the highway commission for nearly a month on this road.

Steve Roach, the sheriff, was notified of the robbery and he with Deputy Sheriff W. W. Randall went to the road camp east of Burlington Junction about 2:30 o'clock Sunday morning. They with the marshal of Burlington Junction and members of the camp, scoured the nearby country and found the car which Mack had left a mile and a half from the place of the robbery. Yesterday noon they got clue that a man had walked to Quitman and taken the noon train to St. Joseph. Sheriff Roach sent word to the police department at St. Joseph, giving the description of the man and detectives at St. Joseph recognized Mack at the union station, where he was taken into custody.

Sheriff Roach, Deputy Sheriff Randall, with J. L. Poll and Carl Woods, two of the men who were robbed, went to St. Joseph yesterday afternoon and Poll and Woods identified Mack as the alleged robber. They came back to Maryville yesterday evening.

Sheriff Roach secured a warrant for the arrest of Mack this morning and he with Deputy Sheriff Randall, left at 1 o'clock this afternoon for St. Joseph to make his arrest and bring Mack to Maryville.

The following story is taken from today's St. Joseph Gazette:

"Upon receiving descriptions of Bob Mack from Sheriff Roach at Maryville, Mo., near where he is charged with having held up and robbed a road gang of workmen of nearly $200, Detectives Gardner, Smith, Ellis and Swepston were able to recognize and arrest Mack at the union station Sunday afternoon.

When the detectives entered the train, they said, Mack leaned down in his seat. When he was searched a large 44-caliber revolver was found in his possession. He is held at central station for investigation."

GAMES SCHEDULED FOR HIGH SCHOOL

FOUR CONFERENCE GAMES—MOUND CITY FORFEITED

CHILLICOTHE NOV. 29

Trip To Maysville On Nov. 9—No Game With Trenton Because Of—Sub-district Division

Dates were arranged for the Maryville High School football team Saturday at a meeting of the board of control of the Northwest Missouri High School association at the Hotel Robidoux. The final list of the Maryville games will not be complete until next week.

F. E. Patrick, superintendent of schools at Bethany, was elected football manager of the association to succeed Fred Vandersloot, principal of Benton high school.

The schedule was made by drawing lots. The dates were to be arranged by mutual consent.

Maryville drew King City, Lafayette, Rock Port and Mound City for its conference games. Mound City refused to play Maryville and that constitutes a forfeit. Other non-conference games that are to be played by the local team are probably a game with Maysville and a Turkey day game at Chillicothe.

The dates that have been arranged thus far are as follows:

King City, here October 26.
Lafayette, here November 3.
Maysville, there November 9.
Chillicothe, there November 29.
Rock Port, still to schedule.
Mound City, forfeit.

It is not probable that a game will be played with Trenton since the Northwest Missouri district has been sub-divided and Trenton is out of the Maryville sub-district.

There are thirty-six teams in the conference. Each team will play four conference games in the sub-district elimination series. The winners will fight it out in the finals.

The King City game last year ended 24 to 0 in favor of the local Spoofhounds. The Maryville team was off form and should have made the score a great deal more lopsided.

Lafayette was one of the teams last year to score a tally on the Spoofhounds. The final call in a hard fought battle was 13 to 6 in favor of the Spoofhounds.

Maysville was a team with a high per centage last year. Maryville has never played the team.

Rock Port was a track meet for Maryville. 63 to 0 was the final count when the whistle blew.

Chillicothe gave way last year to the Spoofhounds 25 to 0. This year almost all of the letter men are returning and a harder battle is to be expected.

S. T. C. ENROLLMENT STARTS TOMORROW

TENTATIVE ENROLLMENT FOR NUMBER OF STUDENTS TODAY.

MANY MUSIC PUPILS

Larson Will Start College Band and Orchestra Work as Soon as Enrollment Is Complete.

Tentative registration cards are being filled out today by many of the students who have arrived in Maryville and wish to enroll in the College. Although none are being enrolled Dean Colbert and C. E. Parteh, of the vocational guidance department, are assisting the prospective students in arranging their courses.

Tomorrow morning Ed Williams of the Real Estate Bank will be at the College building receiving registration fees and the entire College faculty will be in their rooms assisting the students. The incidental fees are $12.50. This includes all of the fees which the student is required to pay except library and locker fee.

All of the pupils taking music for College credits in connection with their regular College work are asked to see Chas. R. Gardner, dean of College Conservatory. Those who wish to take music as special work should see the individual instructors at their rooms in the conservatory. Mr. Gardner says that the conservatory has a splendid advance enrollment for the fall quarter's work.

Students are arriving on every train coming into Maryville and are directed by Mrs. Perrin to rooms. The housing situation will cause the Maryville residents to open up their homes.

The Trenton delegation has already arrived in Maryville with about ten athletes in the bunch.

Skidmore is sending the full quota of their graduating class which is 100 per cent.

Six hundred students are expected to enroll this winter. This will be a slight increase over last winter's enrollment figures.

William Larson, director of the band and orchestra of the College announced that he expected to begin the musical work as soon as possible. All students who take music work at the conservatory are included in the College orchestra.

K. C. Packing Plant May Close Soon

Officials of Morris & Co. Admit That Shut—Down May Come in January

Kansas City, Sept. 10—A shut down in the Kansas City plant of Morris & Co., was forecast today by an official of the packing firm.

The prediction followed rumors that the big plant was to close today. Henry C. Carlson, local general manager of Armour & Co., with which the Morris firm is merged, denied a shut-down is near.

Officials of the Morris Company, however, admitted the probability of a shut-down in January. The Morris plant employs 2000 men and has a killing capacity of 1500 cattle, 3000 hogs and 2000 sheep daily.

Hunting Enthusiasts are Getting Prepared

Season on Ducks Opens 15th of Month —424 County Licenses are Issued to Date.

It won't be long before the Nodaway and One Hundred and Two rivers will be popular resorts for the hunters of Nodaway. The nimrods are waiting anxiously for the fifteenth of September to approach. On that day the hunting season on water fowls opens.

Already 424 county licenses have been issued to Nodaway residents. Twenty state permits have been taken out.

The state law prohibits the shooting of doves, prairie chickens, pheasants (females) and deer, so it will evidently fall to the lot of the wild ducks to furnish targets for the numerous shotguns that will soon be in evidence.

However, hunters will have to wait until the eleventh of November to shoot quail. The season on fowls and quail extends until December 31 and from January 1 to April 30. Rabbits are not protected and the season for all kinds of squirrels has been open since June 1.

The state license fee is $2.50, the county license, which most hunters buy is a $1 less.

Volunteers Are Needed

Wanted—Some one with sticky hands and trousers who will climb the 30-foot flag pole in front of Washington High School. It is not known whether the Board of Education offers any reward. However, those in charge at the High School would be pleased to have some one do the stunt as the flag pole was put in the cement foundation before the bright-colored ball, which goes on top of the pole, arrived. The Democrat-Forum wants to have moving pictures taken when the feat of climbing the pole is performed.

COMPLETE PLANS FOR A. R. C. DRIVE

STRICKEN JAPANESE MUST BE AIDED IMMEDIATELY.

MARYVILLE QUOTA $485

Is Urgent Cause—Fred Wolfers Is the Chairman of Local Committee to Raise Funds.

Final arrangements were completed this morning by the Disaster Relief Section of the American Red Cross for Nodaway County, for the raising of this County's quota of the $5,000,000, which is being raised by the American Red Cross for the relief of the sufferers of the terrible disaster in Japan.

It is well to recall at this time the splendid way in which the people of Japan responded with aid at the time of the catastrophe in San Francisco when they sent both money and provisions to the devastated area.

This cause is urgent. Aid must be given at once. For this reason the Committee asks that citizens be prompt and generous in their response to solicitors.

Mr. L. M. Eek, Chairman of the Nodaway County Committee, talked with each of the chairmen of the various committees of the county this morning, urging them to complete their solicitation in the next day or two. Judging from the response which is being met with, the sum of $1000, which is Nodaway County's share, will be easily raised.

Fred Wolfers is Chairman of the Maryville committee.

The Maryville committee consists of F. S. King, Fred R. Wolfers, Mrs. C. C. Hellmers and Mrs. W. O. Garrett. The women will solicit the residence district and the men the business district.

Nodaway County has always done its part in matters of this kind and Maryville will do its part today and tomorrow.

The following are the names of the chairmen, with the quota allotted to each town in the county:

SEVEN DESTROYERS WRECKED ON COAST

BOARD OF INQUIRY MAY MAKE INVESTIGATION

MANY LIVES ARE LOST

Greatest Single Loss Ever Suffered by American Navy—Will Not Suspend Operations

Washington, Sept. 10—The naval department is suspending judgment upon the disaster that befell seven American destroyers late Saturday and piled them up on the southern California coast, with a loss of more than a score of lives, Edwin Denby, Secretary of Navy, said today.

Details of the wreck Secretary Denby said, are not sufficient to permit a suspension of operations. It is regarded as certain, however, that a board of inquiry will be appointed to go into all causes of the wreck.

The loss of the seven destroyers is the greatest ever suffered by the American navy at one time, naval officials said.

The belief is that is was almost miraculous that there was not even a heavier loss of lives.

New Paper Money Will Be Issued Soon

Distinctive Designs Will Hamper Work Of Counterfeiters—To Standardize "Greenbacks"

Washington, Sept. 10—Secretary Mellon's approval of the new designs for paper money, under consideration for more than a year, was announced at the treasury department and many new bills of distinctive type and marking soon will be in circulation.

The new designs at first will affect only United States notes, silver certificates and federal reserve notes in denominations up to one hundred dollars, with the exception of the "unpopular" two-dollar note, but it is hoped later to extend the new designs—amounting almost to a program of standardization— to national bank notes and ultimately to rare gold certificates.

Obstacles For Counterfeit

Working to make the job of the counterfeit less remunerative, treasury experts expose the method of standardizing designs, giving one denomination of all kinds of currency one distinctive design for face and back, so that those persons into whose possession the money comes may recognize instantly if alteration has been attempted.

The faces of the new bills will carry portraits of well known figures in American history, mostly presidents, and the best known faces have been chosen for the bills most used. The one-dollar bill, for instance, will have Washington's portrait; the five, Lincoln's, and the ten, Jackson's. Cleveland's likeness will appear on the twenty-dollar bills while for the fifties and the one hundreds, the portraits of General Grant and Benjamin Franklin, respectively, have been selected.

The seal, sequence numbers and symbol letters will be over printed in colors on the face of the United States notes and silver certificates and the same plan will be followed for the federal reserve notes, which also will carry the name of the issuing reserve bank. The overprinting on the silver certificates will be blue, on the United States notes green, and on the federal reserve notes red.

Fate of the "Twos" in Doubt

The backs of the new bills will be of the same general character as the present gold notes, consisting of the conventional scroll work panel with lathe work border and not pictures and thus the design of any one denomination will become well known, whether it be a United States note, silver certificate or federal reserve note. As for the 2-dollar bill, the statment said the committee had been unable to find reasons for its unpopularity, but a new design for it was not included in the changes approved by Mr. Mellon since its discontinuation is being considered. If it finally is decided to continue the bill, however, a portrait of Thomas Jefferson will be used and a design in accord with the new program will be worked out.

36 States Use Gasoline Tax

Levy Pays for Maintenance of Road, Chart Shows.

Thirty-six states in the Union have a gasoline tax varying from 1 to 3 cents a gallon in actual operation ,a chart compiled by the Vermont State Chamber of Commerce at Burlington, Vt. The chart, which is the result of a survey made by the Vermont chamber, also shows that the state of Massachusetts, where no gasoline tax law is in effect, is circulating petitions applying for a referendum vote for a gasoline tax law in 1924, and that Georgia has a bill before the state legislature providing for a tax of 2 cents a gallon on all gasoline sold to provide for highway construction.

Nineteen of the states had a gasoline tax prior to 1923, ten of them legislating in 1923 to raise the amount of the tax from 1 and 2 cents to 2 and 3 cents per gallon. Arkansas was one of the states to raise the tax from 1 to 3 cents.

Seventeen of the thirty-six states where the tax is in operation had a gasoline tax before 1923, but passed laws this year to collect from 1 to 3 cents on each gallon of gasoline sold. Seven of them collect 1 cent a gallon, eight collect 2 cents a gallon, one state collects 2½ cents, and one collects 3 cents on each gallon sold. In all but two of the states, Alabama and Texas, the tax collected on gasoline is devoted solely to the maintenance of roads, and bills are pending now in these states to amend the law to devote all of the tax to improving the highways.

The laws are written in most of the states to read that the tax will be used for road maintenance, "solely," "exclusively" for "reconstruction, and for no other purpose," and other terms which the Vermont Chamber of Commerce says will give an idea of the general characteristic policies of the state where the tax is in force. The Utah law provides that any balance left after the payment of interest and sinking fund charges on state road bonds shall be deposited to the credit of the state highway and maintenance fund.

The West Virginia law provides that the fund shall be used "only for the purpose of the reconstruction, maintenance and repair of roads and highways and for the payment of the interest on state bonds issued for road purposes." The Delaware law is very similar to that in force in West Virginia.

The BROWN MOUSE

by Herbert Quick

COPYRIGHT BY THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

Herbert Quick.

Herbert Quick has been such a busy man in various lines of activity that the wonder is he has found time to write books; but not only has he found the time, but has been very successful as a writer. "The Brown Mouse" has become a sort of textbook in agricultural colleges and has been as widely read by teachers and farmers, probably, as any other story ever written. His "Vandemark's Folly" is one of the very successful books of the past two years and he seems to have scored even more heavily with his recent novel, "The Hawkeye." The list of his novels and short stories is a long one and in general excellence would do credit to a person who had devoted all his time to literature.

This author was born on a farm near Steamboat Rock, Grundy county, Iowa. From farming he turned to school-teaching and while principal of a ward school in Mason City, studied law. After being admitted to the bar he practiced in Sioux City and first came into prominence as member and counsel for the Citizens' committee which prosecuted boodlers. He was thrice nominated and once elected mayor of Sioux City and later was nominated for supreme judge. He was once associate editor of LaFollette's Weekly at Madison, Wis., and later editor of Farm & Fireside, Springfield, Ohio. He resigned a membership in the Federal Farm Loan bureau, Washington, in 1919. During a part of the war he was chairman for the Far East of the American Red Cross, with the rank of colonel. Several years ago he moved to Berkeley Springs, West Virginia, and is now recognized as one of the leading citizens of that state.

"The Brown Mouse" is probably the greatest exemplification ever produced of the romance and fascination that can be made to attach to the occupations of teaching and farming. The story is so charmingly constructed that it pleases people of all classes and is relished by children as well as adults; and the practical ideas which it contains have awakened communities all over the world. The ideas have been adopted in hundreds of places as part of the regular school work and part of the legitimate advancement of farming science.

CHAPTER I

A Maiden's "Humph!"

Jim brought from his day's work all the fragrances of next year's meadows. He had been feeding the crops. All things have opposite poles, and the scents of the farm are no exception to the rule. Just now, Jim Irwin possessed in his clothes and person the olfactory pole opposite to the new-mown hay, the fragrant butter and the scented breath of the lowing kine—perspiration and top-dressing.

He was not quite so keenly conscious of this as was Jennie Woodruff. Had he been so, the glimmer of her white pique dress on the bench under the basswood would not have drawn him back from the gate. He had come to the house to ask Colonel Woodruff about the farm work, and having received instructions to take a team and join in the road work next day, he had gone down the walk between the beds of four o'clocks and petunias to the lane. Turning to latch the gate, he saw through the dusk the white dress under the tree and drawn by the greatest attraction known in nature, had re-entered the Woodruff grounds and strolled back.

A brief hello betrayed old acquaintance, and that social equality which still persists in theory between the work people on the American farm and the family of the employer. A desultory murmur of voices ensued. Jim Irwin sat down on the bench—not too close, be it observed, to the pique skirt. . . . There came into the voices a note of deeper earnestness, betokening something quite aside from the rippling of the course of true love running smoothly. In the man's voice was a tone of protest and pleading. . . .

"I know you are," said she, "but after all these years don't you think you should be at least preparing to be something more than that?"

"What can I do?" he pleaded. "I'm tied hand and foot. . . . I might have. . . ."

"You might have," said she, "but, Jim, you haven't . . . and I don't see any prospects. . . ."

"I have been writing for the farm papers," said Jim; "but . . ."

"But that doesn't get you anywhere, you know. . . . You're a great deal more able and intelligent than Ed, and see what a fine position he has in Chicago. . . ."

"There's mother, you know," said Jim gently.

"You can't do anything here," said Jennie. "You've been a farm-hand for fifteen years . . . and you always will be unless you pull yourself loose. Even a girl can make a place for herself if she doesn't marry and leaves the farm. You're twenty-eight years old."

"It's all wrong!" said Jim gently. "The farm ought to be the place for the best sort of career—I love the soil."

"I've been teaching for only two years, and they say I'll be nominated for county superintendent if I'll take it. Of course I won't—it seems silly—but if it were you, now, it would be a first step to a life that leads to something."

"Mother and I can live on my wages—and the garden and chickens, and the cow," said Jim. "After I received my teacher's certificate, I tried to work out some way of doing the same thing on a country teacher's wages. I couldn't. It doesn't seem right."

Jim rose and after pacing back and forth sat down again, a little closer to Jennie. Jennie moved away to the extreme end of the bench, and the shrinking away of Jim as if he had been repelled by some sort of negative magnetism showed either sensitiveness or temper.

"It seems as if it ought to be possible," said Jim, "for a man to do work on the farm, or in the rural schools, that would make him a livelihood. If he is only a field-hand, it ought to be possible for him to save money and buy a farm."

"Pa's land is worth two hundred dollars an acre," said Jennie. "Six months of your wages for an acre—even if you lived on nothing."

"No," he assented, "it can't be done, and the other thing can't, either. There ought to be such conditions that a teacher could make a living."

"They do," said Jennie, "if they can live at home during vacations. I do."

"But a man teaching in the country ought to be able to marry."

"Marry!" said Jennie, rather unfeelingly, I think. "You marry!" Then after remaining silent for nearly a minute, she uttered the syllable—without the utterance of which this narrative would not have been written. "You marry! Humph!"

Jim Irwin rose from the bench tingling with the insult he found in her tone. They had been boy-and-girl sweethearts in the old days at the Woodruff schoolhouse down the road, and before the fateful time when Jennie went "off to school" and Jim began to support his mother. They had even kissed—and on Jim's side, lonely as was his life, cut off as it necessarily was from all companionship save that of his tiny home and his fellow-workers of the field, the tender little love-story was the sole romance of his life. Jennie's "Humph!" retired this romance from circulation, he felt. It showed contempt for the idea of his marrying. It relegated him to a sexless category with other defectives, and badged him with the celibacy of a sort of Twentieth-century monk, without the honor of the priestly vocation. From another girl it would have been bad enough, but from Jennie Woodruff—and especially on that quiet summer night under the linden—it was insupportable.

"Good night," said Jim—simply because he could not trust himself to say more.

"Good night," replied Jennie, and sat for a long time wondering just how deeply she had unintentionally wounded the feelings of her father's field-hand; deciding that if he was driven from her forever, it would solve the problem of terminating that old childish love affair which still persisted in occupying a suite of rooms all of its own in her memory; and finally repenting of the unpremeditated thrust which might easily have hurt too deeply so sensitive a man as Jim Irwin. But girls are not usually so made as to feel any very bitter remorse for their male victims, and so Jennie slept very well that night.

Jim Irwin was bony and rugged and homely, with a big mouth, and wide ears, and a form stooped with labor. He had fine, lambent, gentle eyes which lighted up his face when he smiled. He was not ugly. Jim Irwin possessed charm. That is why little Jennie Woodruff had asked him to help with her lessons, rather oftener than was necessary, in those old days in the Woodruff schoolhouse when Jennie wore her hair down her back.

But in spite of this homely charm of personality, Jim Irwin was set off from his fellows of the Woodruff neighborhood. He was different. In local parlance, he was an off ox. He was as odd as Dick's hatband. He ran in a gang by himself. He had always liked to read, and had piles of literature in his attic room which was good, because it was cheap.

Very few people know that cheap literature is very likely to be good, because it is old and unprotected by copyright. Jim had Emerson, Thoreau, an Encyclopedia of English Literature, some editions of standard poets in paper covers, and a few Ruskins and Carlyles—all read to rags.

In fact, Jim had a good library of publications which can be obtained gratis, or very cheaply—and he knew their contents. He had a personal philosophy, which while it had cost him the world in which his fellows lived, had given him one of his own, in which he moved as lonely as a cloud, and as untouched of the life about him.

By every test of common life, he was a failure. His family history was a badge of failure. People despised a man who was so incontestably smarter than they, and yet could do no better with himself than to work in the fields alongside the tramps and transients and hoboes. Save for his mother and their cow and garden and flock of fowls and their wretched little rented house, he was a tramp himself.

His duties, his mother, and his dead father's status as an outcast took away his citizenship in Boyville, and drove him in upon himself, and, at first, upon his school books and later upon Emerson, Thoreau, Ruskin and the poets, and the agricultural reports and bulletins.

All this degraded—or exalted—him to the position of an intellectual farm-hand, with a sense of superiority and a feeling of degradation. It made Jennie Woodruff's "Humph!" potent to keep him awake that night, and send him to the road work with Colonel Woodruff's team next morning with hot eyes and a hotter heart.

Colonel Woodruff's gray percherons seemed to feel the unrest of their driver, for they fretted and actually executed a clumsy prance as Jim Irwin pulled them up at the end of the turnpike across Bronson's Slew—a peat-marsh which annually offered the men of the Woodruff district the opportunity to hold the male equivalent of a sewing circle while working out their road taxes. Columbus Brown, the pathmaster, prided himself on the Bronson Slew turnpike as his greatest triumph in road engineering. The work consisted in hauling, dragging and carrying gravel out on the low fill which carried the road across the marsh, and then watching it slowly settle until the next summer.

"Haul gravel from the east gravel bed, Jim," called Columbus Brown from the lowest spot in the middle of the turnpike. "Take Newt here to help load."

Jim smiled his habitual slow, gentle smile at Newton Bronson, seventeen, undersized, tobacco-stained, profane and proud of the fact that he had once beaten his way from Des Moines to Faribault on freight trains. A source of anxiety to his father, and the subject of many predictions that he would come to no good end, Newton was out on the road work because he was likely to be of little use on the farm. Clearly, Newton was on the downward road in a double sense—and yet, Jim Irwin rather liked him.

"The fellers have put up a job on you, Jim," volunteered Newton, as they began filling the wagon with gravel.

"Fellers Have Put Up a Job on You, Jim."

"What sort of job?" asked Jim.

"They're nominating you for teacher," replied Newton.

"Since when has the position of teacher been an elective office?" asked Jim.

"Sure, it ain't elective," answered Newton. "But they say that with as many brains as you've got sloshing around loose in the neighborhood, you're a candidate that can break the deadlock in the school board."

Jim shoveled on silently for a while, and by example urged Newton to earn the money credited to his father's assessment for the day's work.

A slide of earth just then brought down a sweet-clover plant growing rankly beside the top of the pit. Jim Irwin pulled it loose from its anchorage, and after looking attentively at the roots, laid the whole plant on the bank for safety.

"What do you want of that weed?" asked Newton.

Jim picked it up and showed him the nodules on its roots—little white knobs, smaller than pinheads.

"Ever hear of the use of nitrates to enrich the soil?"

"Ain't that the stuff the old man used on the lawn last spring?"

"Yes," said Jim, "your father used some on his lawn. We don't put it on our fields in Iowa—not yet; but if it weren't for those white specks on the clover-roots, we should be obliged to do so—as they do back east."

"How do them white specks keep us from needin' nitrates?"

"It's a long story," said Jim. "You see, before there were any plants big enough to be visible—if there had been any one to see them—the world was full of little plants so small that there may be billions of them in one of these little white specks. They knew how to take the nitrates from the air—"

"Air!" ejaculated Newton. "Nitrates in the air! You're crazy!"

"No," said Jim. "There are tons of nitrogen in the air that press down on your head—but the big plants can't get it through their leaves, or their roots. They never had to learn, because the little plants—bacteria—located on those roots and tapped them for the sap they needed—began to get their board and lodgings off the big plants. And in payment for their hotel bills, the little plants took nitrogen out of the air for both themselves and their hosts."

"What d'ye mean by 'hosts'?"

"Their hotel-keepers—the big plants. And now the plants that have the hotel roots for the bacteria furnish nitrogen not only for themselves, but for the crops that follow. Corn can't get nitrogen out of the air; but clover can—and that's why we ought to plow down clover before a crop of corn."

"Gee!" said Newt. "If you could get to teach our school, I'd go again."

"It would interfere with your pool playing."

"What business is that o' yours?" interrogated Newt defiantly.

"Well, get busy with that shovel," suggested Jim, who had been working steadily, driving out upon the fill occasionally to unload. On his return from dumping the next load, Newton seemed, in a superior way, quite amiably disposed toward his workfellow—rather the habitual thing in the neighborhood.

"I'll work my old man to vote for you for teacher," said he.

"Those school directors," replied Jim, "have become so bullheaded that they'll never vote for any one except the applicants they've been voting for."

"The old man says he will have Prue Foster again, or he'll give the school a darned long vacation, unless Peterson and Bonner join on some one else. That would beat Prue, of course."

"And Con Bonner won't vote for any one but Maggie Gilmartin," added Jim.

"And," supplied Newton, "Haakon Peterson says he'll stick to Herman Paulson until the Hot Springs freeze over."

"And there you are," said Jim. "You tell your father for me that I think he's a mere mule—and that the whole district thinks the same."

"All right," said Newt. "I'll tell him that while I'm working him to vote for you."

Jim smiled grimly. He had remained a peasant because the American rural teacher is placed economically lower than the peasant. He gave Newton's chatter no consideration. But when, in the afternoon, he hitched his team with others to the big road grader, and the gang became concentrated within talking distance, he found that the project of heckling and chaffing him about his eminent fitness for a scholastic position was to be the real entertainment of the occasion.

"Jim's the candidate to bust the deadlock," said Columbus Brown, with a wink. "Just like Garfield in that Republican convention he was nominated in—eh, Con?"

"Con" was Cornelius Bonner, an Irishman, one of the deadlocked school board, and the captain of the road grader. He winked back at the pathmaster.

"Jim's the gray-eyed man o' destiny," he replied, "if he gets two votes in that board."

"You'd vote for me, wouldn't you, Con?" asked Jim.

"I'll try annything wance," replied Bonner.

"Try voting with Ezra Bronson once, for Prue Foster," suggested Jim. "She's done good work here."

"Opinions differ," said Bonner, "an' when you try annything just for wance, it shouldn't be an irrevocable shtip, me bye."

"You're a reasonable board of public servants," said Jim ironically. "I'd like to tell the whole board what I think of them.

"Come down tonight," said Bonner jeeringly. "We're going to have a board meeting at the schoolhouse and ballot a few more times. Come down, and be the Garfield of the convintion. We've lacked brains on the board, that's clear. They ain't a man on the board that iver studied algebra, 'r that knows more about farmin' than their imployers. Come down to the schoolhouse, and we'll have a field-hand addriss the school board—and begosh, I'll move yer illiction mesilf! Come, now, Jimmy, me bye, be game. It'll vary the program, annyhow."

The entire gang grinned. Jim flushed, and then reconquered his calmness of spirit.

"All right, Con," said he. "I'll come and tell you a few things—and you can do as you like about making the motion."

Back Wash

THE business of refining petroleum has many hazards—not the least of which accrues from the necessity of balancing the supply with the demand.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) always has kept itself in a position to supply the demand of its customers for petroleum products, no matter how great or abnormal the demand might be.

During the winter months, the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) refined and stored large quantities of gasoline in anticipation of the busy summer season. Other refiners in the Middle West pursued the same course.

In previous years the midcontinent refiners have found a ready market for their surplus product on the Atlantic seaboard.

This year the heavy, unprecedented and unlooked-for California production upset calculations. Enormous quantities of California crude petroleum and California gasoline were shipped to the Eastern seaboard by boat, flooding the market and cutting off one of the principal outlets of the midcontinent refiners.

The result was a back wash of distress gasoline in the Middle West which had to be sold.

It was this distress gasoline that the Governor of South Dakota was able to purchase at less than the present day cost of manufacture and distribution. By selling it without profit, and without any expense for distribution, he was enabled to announce a drastic, temporary reduction from the then existing selling price.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) while protesting that it was below the cost of production, refining and distribution plus a reasonable profit met this price because it is the established principle of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) that its customers shall be able to buy its products as cheaply as they can buy similar products from any competitors.

The success achieved by the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is due in larger measure to the fact that at all times it has held paramount the welfare of its customers whose respect and esteem it has won and intends to hold.

GOFORTH ANSWERS CLARK'S CRITICISM

CUSTODIAN TURNS ON ALL THE LIGHTS AT 7:30 P. M.

NEED AGENT DURING DAY

Says There Are Not Many Persons Leaving Maryville For the North At Night

W. E. Goforth, agent of the Burlington here, today replied to the criticism of Editor J. J. Clark of the Bedford Times-Republican which was published in Saturday's Democrat-Forum.

Mr. Goforth said: "No towns between Creston and St. Joseph, even Bedford, Maryville or Savannah, have anyone selling tickets at night.

"Here at Maryville a custodian, John From, is to report at the Burlington station at 7:45 o'clock each evening. This custodian is to tourn on all the lights at the station, to check baggage and to maintain order. Three lights are left on at the station when we leave about 5:30 o'clock in the afternoons, and then when From comes on, more lights are turned on.

"On this particular night that Editor Clark speaks of, I admit, due to some unfortunate circumstances, the custodian was late in getting to the station. To my knowledge this is the first time it has occurred. And it is the first time any criticism has been heard about evening service at the Burlington."

Mr. Goforth said it was thought better and more important to have the ticket seller at the station during hours in the day time instead of stretching it over a period to take care of this work at nights. This ticket seller is on an 8-hour schedule. He contends there are not many passengers leaving Maryville going north on the evening train, except when the weather is bad.

"There's wouldn't be enough money taken in on some of these evenings," Mr. Goforth said, "to pay jitney fare."

Many times during the day, Mr. Goforth stated, people who are going away on long trips or wanting reservations on trains elsewhere, are needing attention and the ticket seller is kept there for that purpose. If the ticket seller had to work at night, he would not go on duty until 4 o'clock in the afternoons and would have no time to give to people going on long trips.

Mr. Goforth has been agent of the Burlington here for a number of years and is known as one of the most accomodating agents the Burlington has had.

EMULATING BURBANK

Charles Sherbrooke, twelve-year-old lad of Kirkland, Wash., is being hailed as the boy wizard of plants and flowers. As a result of his experiments new species of primulinus, a new type of gladiolus and other flowers have been developed. He keeps a record of colors and other attributes, plants seeds from the cross and sometimes the resulting flower is as new and gay as though the boy had dipped his brush into some vivid stain and colored the bloom by hand.

Eclipse of Sun Today Will be Visible Here

An eclipse of the sun was visible in Maryville today beginning at 2:13 o'clock this afternoon, reaching its maximum at 3:23 o'clock and ending at 4:28 o'clock. Sixty per cent of the sun's area was covered.

This was the first eclipse visible here since June 8, 1918, and will probably be the last until 1945. There will be one in 1925, visible in the northeastern part of the United State, but it will occur in the early morning under winter conditions so that prospects for observation are had. The eclipse here was partial, totality existing in the United States only in southern California.

Many people here with smoked glass were viewing the eclipse of the sun this afternoon.
